Cookies and Other Technologies

Touring Health's website, online services, interactive applications, email messages, and advertisements may use various technologies, now and hereafter devised, that automatically collect certain usage information whenever you visit or interact with our Site. Usage information may be collected by various methods, including, but not limited to, "cookies" and other technologies such as pixel tags, web beacons, mobile device identifiers, and embedded scripts.

- Cookies are small data files that a web browser places on your computer when it is used to visit a website. The use of cookies is a common practice on many websites. We may place cookies on your computer to allow us to recognize you on our website during future visits, to measure web traffic, to offer you certain products or services, or to customize your visit. Your Internet browser may include settings that permit you to block cookies or to be notified when cookies are placed.
 - Some cookies we use are "session" cookies, meaning they are automatically deleted from your device after you close your browser at the end of your session. Session cookies are used to optimize the websites' performance and limit the amount of redundant data downloaded during a single session. We also may use "persistent" cookies, which remain on your computer or device unless deleted by you (or by your browser settings).
 - We may use persistent cookies for various purposes, such as statistical performance analysis, to ensure the ongoing quality of our services.
 - We and third parties may use session and persistent cookies for analytics and advertising purposes, as described herein. Most web browsers automatically accept cookies, but you may set your browser to block certain cookies (see below). In accordance with applicable law, we may obtain your consent separately before collecting information by automated means using cookies or similar devices.
- Our Site may use Google Analytics, a vendor's service that uses cookies, web beacons, web pixels, and/or similar technology to collect and store anonymous information about you. You can learn more about Google Analytics' privacy policy and ways to opt-out of Google Analytics tracking by visiting the Google Analytics website.
- Our Site may use Adobe's analytics and on-site personalization services, which use cookies, web beacons, web pixels, and similar technology to collect and store information about you or your device or browser. You can learn more about how Adobe may handle information collected through our use of its services and your options for controlling this activity by visiting Adobe's website.

We cannot use Cookies or other technology to identify you; thus, the information collected is treated as non-personal. However, to the extent that Internet Protocol (IP) addresses or similar identifiers are considered personal information by local law, we also treat these identifiers as personal information. Similarly, to the extent that non-personal information is combined with personal information, we treat the combined information as personal information for the purposes of this Privacy Policy. Cookies allow website managers to adapt materials to your computer and include information such as what pages you visited, how often you visited them, and what your preferences may be, and they may enable certain features on this Site. Most web browsers accept cookies, but you may be able to adjust your browser settings not to allow them or to let you know when they are being sent. Your use of some features on this Site may be limited if you disable cookies.

Pixel tags enable us to send email messages in a format our customers can read, and they tell us whether the email has been opened. We may use this information to reduce or eliminate the number or type of messages sent to our customers. Web beacons are small graphic images or other web programming code inserted into a web page or email that count visitors to the Site, monitor how users navigate the Site, count how many emails that were sent are actually opened, or count how many particular articles or links were actually viewed. Certain mobile service providers uniquely identify mobile devices, and we, or our third-party service providers, may receive such device information if you access the Site through mobile devices. Certain features of our Site may require the collection of mobile phone numbers, and we may associate that phone number with mobile device identification information. An embedded script is programming code designed to collect information about your interactions with the Site, such as the links you click on. The code is temporarily downloaded onto your device from our server or a third-party service provider and is active only while you are connected to the Site, and is deactivated or deleted thereafter.

We may also use application program interfaces to gather information. An application is any program or service which we may operate that allows us to interact directly with you. An application may be displayed online, through mobile services, or on other platforms.

As is true of most websites, we gather some information automatically and store it in log files. This information includes IP addresses, browser type and language, Internet service provider (ISP), referring and exit pages, operating system, date/time stamp, and clickstream data. We use this information to understand and analyze trends, administer the site, learn about user behavior on the site, and gather demographic information about our user base as a whole. Touring Health may use this information in our marketing and advertising services.

In some of our email messages, we use a "click-through URL" linked to our website's content. When customers click one of these URLs, they pass through a separate web server before arriving at the destination page on our Site. We track this click-through data to help us determine interest in particular topics and measure the effectiveness of our customer communications. If you prefer to avoid being tracked this way, you should not click text or graphic links in the email messages.

Touring Health and its partners may use cookies and other technologies in mobile advertising services to control the number of times you see a given ad, deliver ads that relate to your interests and measure the effectiveness of ad campaigns. If you do not want to receive ads with this level of relevance on your mobile device, please contact us at info@touringhealth.com.

You can set your browser to refuse all or some browser cookies or to alert you when cookies are being sent.

Some web browsers may have settings that allow you to transmit "do-not-track" signals to websites. Like many websites, this Site does not take action in response to these signals. To learn more about "Do Not Track" signals, visit allaboutdnt.com. Please note that we, or third parties, may collect personal information about your online activities over time and across different devices and online properties when you use the Site.
